Jennifer is a professional writer, editor, and public relations professional who has spent her career advocating for her clients across a broad range of industries. Through leading multiple political campaigns, strategic marketing and public relations, and relationship building with key community leaders, Jennifer has successfully led the passing of tax levies that allow vital local boards to continue serving vulnerable populations and community colleges to realize the need for affordable and attainable education. She has also been a leader in developing and executing strategic initiatives, company-wide training programs, and equity-based opportunities for internal and external constituents for Lorain County Community College and the Lorain County Board of Developmental Disabilities, and companies such as Applied Industrial Technologies, ProEd Communications, and Williams-Labadie.

In addition to her professional experience, Jennifer is also a tireless advocate for community growth and stability through her involvement in several local chapters of national boards and is an active member of both the Cleveland Clinic Advisory Board and the North Coast Rotary.
